November 2018

Cutting Christmas trees on unrestricted state lands in the Matanuska Valley Moose Range and the Matanuska and Susitna valleys is allowed with some stipulations. Cutting of trees is prohibited in state parks and Department of Transportation (DOT) rights-of-way. It is also prohibited on Alaska Native lands and other private property. It is important to properly identify land ownership where you intend to cut your tree. See the maps below for more detailed tree cutting areas. If you have any questions regarding land ownership, consult the Division of Forestry Area office in Palmer at 907-761-6300.

No permit or fee is required to cut a tree. Trees must be no more than 15 feet tall and only one tree per household is permitted. Trees should be cut as low to the ground as possible. Christmas trees cut on state land are for personal use only and may not be sold. Please do not litter and be courteous to other tree cutters and/or residents who live in the area.

Keep in mind, the Division of Forestry does not maintain forest roads. Anyone traveling on forest roads should have appropriate gear and equipment in the event they become stuck. This includes tire chains, a shovel, tow strap and warm clothing.

There are other public lands in the Matanuska-Susitna valleys where cutting of Christmas trees is allowed. Visit the links listed below or call the contact numbers to find out more information about cutting trees in the Chugach National Forest and Matanuska-Susitna Borough.
