70	Naming of a historic place to protect and keep sacred from Oil Companies	7/5/2016 3:41 PM
71	There are two types of preservation, the literal physical preservation of a tangible resource in which it is maintained and sustained in perpetuity. Then there is preservation of the themes, data, and stories of a resource without actually preserving the physical components--or in some cases recreation of physical components. When I think of preservation, I think of "keeping something alive" in general--whether that is through dissemination of information or actual physical maintenance.	7/5/2016 2:56 PM

62	Revitalize the possible uses of traditional knowledge and experiences	5/20/2016 4:21 PM
63	Start a statewide program that on its own and by cultivating and feeding into local programs can bring willing untrained community members and volunteers from anywhere into the field to do documentation that otherwise will never get done. SHPO should not accept clearances from people who use their federal positions to go to field locations and/or types of sites that they cannot properly evaluate. SHPO should demand much more exhaustive background work in general before professionals go into the field. Help our communities and the public understand linkages between our past and our present, demonstrating minor and major links that are illustrated by or actually established by the archaeological and built environment, show how we learn from this version/these versions of our past.	5/19/2016 3:24 PM

82	Identifying the truly significant sites in developed areas of Alaska and creating a tourism site visit plan. Develop multi-media resources to identify the significant places in Alaska from the time of the Gold Rush into the modern era.	4/20/2016 10:45 AM

Alaska Historic Preservation Plan: 2018-2023

83	1. Reopen discussions with owners of historic properties - as the market sags, they might be more interested in working with local historic preservation groups. 2. Use more up to date remote sensing (Shorezone aerial photos, Google earth, NASA etc.) to identify coastal sites. Assess coastline losses, threats. 3. Work more collaboratively with local and regional partners to infuse effort with new energy.	4/19/2016 3:27 PM
84	community support	4/18/2016 9:12 PM

Q14 How do we achieve those short-term goals over the next five years? Provide as many suggestions as you wish.

1	First, believe that the overall plan is achievable. Too often the naysayers shout down the dreamers and visionaries. If there is red tape, work to change it or work around it; Please think outside the box! Explore - Work with APU and UA College of Business and Public Policy students in marketing/business programs to develop tourism and marketing plans.	12/22/2016 12:06 PM
2	I think some funding is in order for any project/goal, but also public information, because the more hands, the easier the work.	12/20/2016 5:59 PM
3	Work with state and federal entities to make funding requirement more flexible as they relate to renovation and stabilization of structure and inventory our current collection and provide that data to researchers and students for analysis.	12/19/2016 11:38 AM
4	I would you suggest you 'lean' on the CLGs to execute their responsibilities in the area of community outreach and education.	12/12/2016 1:30 PM
5	Offer college credit for distance and local training	12/7/2016 1:30 PM
6	AK needs sound voices of preservation to help communities	11/29/2016 11:12 AM
7	Lobby the legislature to provide a new funding source - like an income tax.	11/21/2016 8:53 AM
8	Presentation series on Alaskan history and the significance of place. Highlight the major sites in need of preservation effort and discuss why/how they are important or can be revitalized (in the case of structures and buildings) for community use. Interviews with community elders and persons of significance (compile as a video series?). Online interactive maps (storymaps) highlighting important sites and associated history (general location).	11/21/2016 7:31 AM

53	labor work with testing to prove what was used still can be used in greater capacity	5/20/2016 4:21 PM
54	Sponsor a statewide version of Earthwatch, where people with the interest and funds pay state-identified projects to work with them, paying overhead to the state for management, covering their own expenses and helping fund the field projects. From personal experience it works really well. When interactions between preservationists and kids/students and the general public have a positive impact, find ways to replicate them.	5/19/2016 3:24 PM
55	Provide mid-century modern grant funding.	5/19/2016 10:26 AM
56	Continue to address funding shortfalls with State Legislators	5/17/2016 2:01 PM
57	Work with partners to get the word out - educate everyone about cultural resources, get funding, get people mobilized about sites they're passionate about.	5/17/2016 1:26 PM
58	prioritizing the loss of archeological sites due to coastal erosion over other sites.	5/17/2016 9:23 AM

Alaska Historic Preservation Plan: 2018-2023

60	Need to stick to the strategic plan.	5/13/2016 1:22 PM
61	talk with the people	5/13/2016 11:58 AM
62	Garner funding from trade organizations to develop preservation and interpretive partnerships.	5/12/2016 9:34 AM
63	get the word out through social media, PR, and events, reach out to interested parties	5/2/2016 1:55 PM
64	Identify realistic goals and do it	5/2/2016 1:43 PM
65	Enhance the number of canneries in HRS to accurately reflect the number and condition of the sites, create materials and tool-kits specifically for cannery/ historic maritime property owners, increase the number of canneries listed on NRHP	5/2/2016 10:07 AM
66	community gatherings	4/30/2016 7:08 PM
67	encourage NPS, local historical societies and other groups in a community to get together to create an education day or activity for schools; have historic preservation presentations at economic development conferences and meetings; guidelines for local historic preservation groups in sharing their good work with the public; have an event/presentation that can travel around the state showing how fun historic preservation is, and getting ideas from the public; have division of tourism encourage and solicit historic activities to promote	4/30/2016 5:29 PM
68	Increased social media presence. Make short fun youtube bits.	4/20/2016 3:40 PM
69	Involve the private and public sectors in the collection of historic mixed media to show the growth and development of communities and the areas/structures that have persisted through these changes.	4/20/2016 10:45 AM
70	A media campaign to promote awareness of cultural resources, their value and the laws that protect them.	4/19/2016 3:45 PM
71	Largely through the use of volunteers; try a CBM (citizen based monitoring) approach; approach LEO to see if they would offer their network platform as the basis for a project; attempt to partner with DHS, NOAA, BOEM and other non-traditional funding sources; develop partnerships with the University system to provide research opportunities to graduate students for higher degrees.	4/19/2016 3:27 PM
72	outreach programs	4/18/2016 9:12 PM

Q15 What new partnerships might be formed to expand and strengthen Alaska's historic preservation community?

#	Responses	Date
1	Universities; community councils; tourism industry	12/22/2016 12:06 PM
2	I think partnering MORE with the public will help, as many are curious and some are ignorant, but it matters to them all. Promoting engagement in the preservation process, as well as allowing for the public to EXPERIENCE preserved history, will go a long way to ensuring its continued support, and thus resources (aka funding).	12/20/2016 5:59 PM
3	I would suggest you establish a proactive outreach to the contractor community throughout the state via online CEU approved courses dealing with the facts concerning preservation programs.	12/12/2016 1:30 PM
4	Partner with university and local organizations	12/7/2016 1:30 PM
5	partnerships with tourism and local governments	11/29/2016 11:12 AM
